THE SCIENCE

Whilst general intelligence can be said to be the most powerful single predictor of overall job performance, it is scientifically acknowledged that personality traits not only identify the behavioural tendencies of individuals, but also possess predictive capability in job performance, which is why they are often used in personnel selection. An impressive body of literature has accumulated which provides compelling evidence for the robustness of the Big 5 personality model, which includes Conscientiousness (which appears to tap traits important to the accomplishment of work tasks in all jobs), Extroversion (a valid predictor of performance for managers and sales personnel) and Openness to Experience (a valid predictor of training proficiency). But there are other traits and work styles that are important for specific roles and indeed industries.

The personality factors and work styles measured by our quiz have been carefully developed and psychologically validated. We therefore have well-founded confidence that they accurately measure important aspects of personality and behaviour. Our scientific team are experts in test construction and the measurement of personality and abilities. They assembled the questions, supervised the scoring and provided the interpretations on each of the factors. A statistical procedure known as factor analysis was used to ensure that all of the questions in a scale measure the same underlying trait, and the amount of measurement error associated with the scores was limited. The questions are not only valid in isolation, but in combination with one another, and provide a proper psychometric evaluation of each individual's personality and work styles.

BIG FIVE +1: FACTORS

The Big Five is the most reliable psychometric test for predicting future performance. But we have added another factor, Emotional Intelligence, to make those predictions even better. Hence the Big Five +1!

WHY IS THE BIG FIVE SO IMPORTANT?

Unless behavioural approaches are proven to be reliable, valid, independent and comprehensive they are little more than fortune cookies! Over the past 25 years, a number of researchers have investigated the validity of personality measures for personnel selection purposes. In the last decade the views of many personality psychologists have converged regarding the structure and concepts of personality. Generally, researchers now agree that there are five robust factors of personality which can serve as a meaningful taxonomy for classifying personality attributes – Openness to Experience, Conscientiousness, Extroversion, Agreeableness and Emotional Stability. An important consideration for the field of personal psychology is that these five factors are also relatively independent of cognitive ability. The Big Five is widely recognised as scientifically sound, with each of the factors having a strong "construct validity". This essentially means that each of the factors meets the four categorical standards outlined above. Furthermore, unlike most other approaches the Big Five has predictive power for workplace performance, with Conscientiousness showing validity across all jobs, Extroversion on the performance of managers and sales personnel, and Openness to Experience, a valid predictor of training proficiency. Human resources professionals use the Big Five to help place employees because the factors measured are considered to best represent the underlying traits that make up an individual's overall personality.
